The Legend

JUNE 1939

WEEQUAHIC HIGH SCHOOL

Foreword

• It is difficult to realize that Commencement is the culmination of our four years of high school life. And yet it must be so, for all good things must eventually come to an end. But it shall not be said that we have gone to Weequahic in vain; rather that we have left it, imbued with its traditions and ideals. And who can question these? It is doubtful if any better exist.

How fortunate for us that in these troubled days it has been our happy lot to live in a country which extends to its people the privilege of an education such as we have received at Weequahic. How different might our education have been, had we lived elsewhere. Therefore, let it be our mission in life to bring naught but honor upon that country or upon Weequahic; let it never be said that the name of either was ever sullied by us; let our lives and actions reflect Weequahic's traditions and teachings—for then alone shall we be content.

JEAN M. HEMMER.

Dedication

• To Miss Anna Gerber, our beloved adviser, we, the class of June, nineteen thirty-nine, dedicate this volume of the Legend, with grateful affection. During our stay at Weequahic Miss Gerber's ready smile has cheered us, her sparkling wit refreshed us, and her quiet wisdom calmed our worst fears. We sincerely hope that succeeding classes may have advisers as understanding as she.

To My Friends of June 1939:

- It is my sincere hope that in the years to come you will manage to turn your mistakes to profits, your detractors to well-wishers, and your dreams to realities, and that in time you will agree with Socrates that "no evil can happen to a good man, either in life or after death."

MAX J. HERZBERG.

• It is difficult to express in words our appreciation to our Vice-Principal and friend, Miss Constance D. Bowerman. Her invaluable guidance has helped us immeasurably not only during this term, but many other terms as well. We shall always look upon her with gratitude and affection.

A Valediction

• What shall I wish for you, my young friends who are going forth from Weequahic in these stirring days? Success?—that is difficult to measure; happiness?—that is hard to find. No, let me wish for each of you that, come what may, you may find life a satisfying experience. How you shall do this, I do not know, but I have one rule which should help. So let me give you a final assignment—a life assignment this time—in the words of Edward Bok's Dutch grandmother: "Make you the world a bit more beautiful and better because you have been in it."

Sincerely your friend,

ANNA GERBER

PERSONALS

Class Will

We, the Class of June, 1939, of Weequahic High School, Newark, New Jersey, being as sound of mind as can be expected after four years of grinding (?) toil, do hereby make, publish, and declare this to be our Last Will and Testament.

First: To all boys and girls who desire to grow both mentally and socially, we bequeath a four-year course at our Alma Mater.

Second: To Mr. Max J. Herzberg, our principal, we leave sincere appreciation for valuable advice.

Third: To Miss Constance D. Bowerman, we leave our invention, a schedule-making, course-planning machine, plus some comfortable cushions for her vice-principal's chair.

Fourth: To Miss McCullen, Miss Cuttriss, and Mrs. Bernstein, we bestow diamond studded, solid gold medals for tireless work as Legend Advisers.

Fifth: On succeeding classes, we bequeath an adviser as sympathetic as our own Miss Gerber.

Sixth: To those with classes on the east corridor of the third floor, we leave the inspiring view.

Seventh: To the teachers, we give students who laugh at their jokes; and to the students, teachers who tell funny jokes.

Eighth: To worthy individuals, we bequeath Latin, German, and French books with translations between the lines.

Ninth: To members of the O. B. A., we leave private hall and locker passes with each subscription.

Tenth: To the careworn, weary, and book-laden, we leave our sumptuous elevators and escalators.

Eleventh: To the freshmen, we bequeath an Ice Cream Soda-or-Sundae period, instead of a Milk and Crackers period.

Twelfth: To anyone with a sense of humor, we leave Bernice Meyers' contagious giggle.

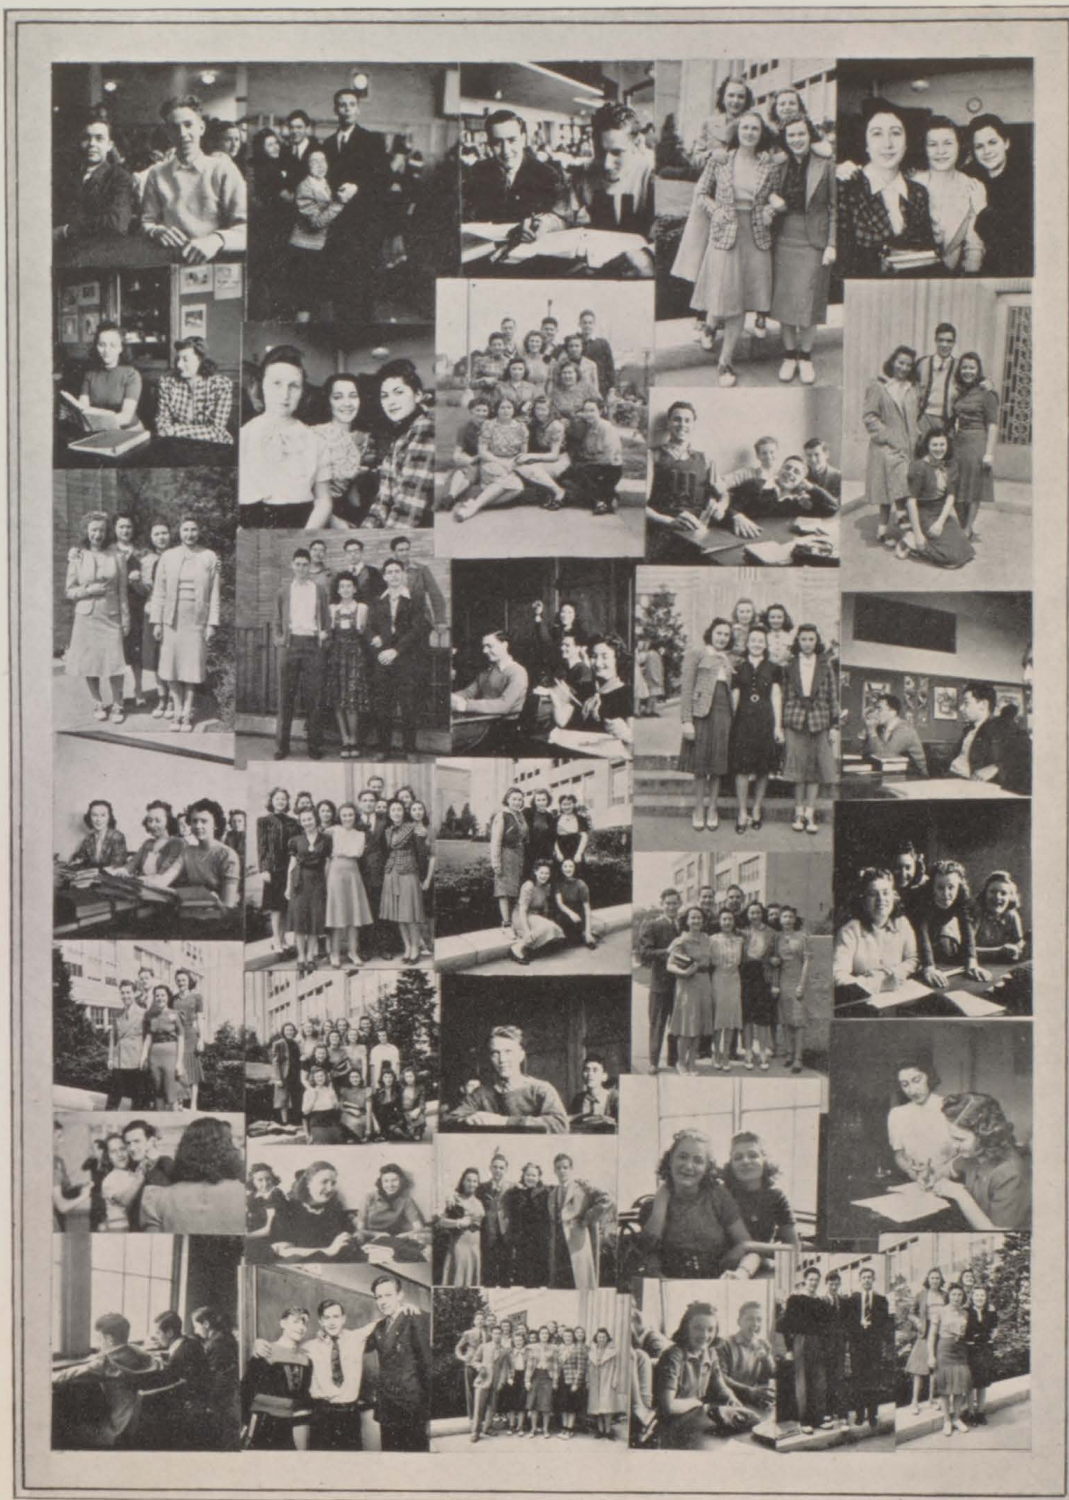

Thirteenth: On a girl who needs a permanent, we bestow Herbert Voswinkel's snazzy natural wave.

Fourteenth: To people who ought to cheer up and laugh a little, we give ten minutes with Charles Rosenstock.

In witness whereof, we have hereunto set our hand and seal this twenty-first day of June in the year one thousand nine hundred and thirty-nine.

Signed: CLASS OF JUNE, 1939.

Witness: DOLCE SECLAW.

Class Prophecy

• We have just flown in from Hollywood to Newark to do our Fall shopping. And what greater department store could we choose in this year 1959 A. D., than Schlank & Loufer's (Motto: If it exists, we have it), the store that put Macy's out of business?

We are greeted at the main entrance by amiable Julius Amster, the managing executive and chief receptionist, who is always present to assist incoming celebrities.

A gentle tap on the shoulder of Mr. Amster calls his attention to a vague-looking gentleman accompanied by a determined-looking young woman. "Sir," says he, "you are now regarding Dr. Richard Berla, M.D., Ph.D., Litt. D., etc., Director of Newark's Pathological and Psychiatric Institute, and this is my able nurse, secretary, and assistant, Miss Rebecca Cohen. I'd like to see something new in strait-jackets, if you please." (S. & L. sells everything.)

A "yoo-hoo" from Mr. Amster brings charming Muriel Hecht to the scene. "Dr. Boiler—" (The name is Berla!). "Oh, yes!—(ahem!) our assistant chief receptionist will show you to the sporting goods department! (ahem)."

After this interruption, we are taken to the executive offices, where a conference of all the departmental heads is in progress. Mr. Amster insists that the entire staff be placed at our disposal. It seems like Old-Home Week, for there are none but familiar faces greeting us: Irving Lieberman, S & L's financial expert; Hannah Yeager, sales supervisor; Gertrude Gurney, buyer in the Women's Clothing Department; Teddy Wirkijowski, chief accountant, who is complaining volubly that 7.063% of the store's sales are 50% discounts to relatives of Schlank and Laufer. Jeanne Heidenreich, child psychologist, who takes care of the youngster customers, listens patiently to David Holder, of the Interior Decorating Department, who is describing enthusiastically his designs for an armchair that will accommodate four persons plus two ashtrays on each arm. We speak to M'sieur Bauer, chief premier in the tenth floor restaurant. He is rather discouraged because Myra Lennett, the restaurant's head dietician, demands more minerals, and less water, in the clear chicken consomme. As we leave, Dick Barkhorn is proudly displaying his blue-prints for S & L's building at the World Exposition, which will be held in Newark in 1960.

The first stop on our shopping tour is the book shop. While making our purchases, we notice Janet Mones laughing hilariously over "A Husband's Memoirs, or, Life in the Doghouse", a volume of poetry by one Janet Mones.

On our way from the bookshop to the millinery department, we pass the Men's Barber Shop. We see Jerry Gorlin, free-lance actor and man about town, receiving a haircut at the hands of our friend, Leonard "Figaro" Krugman.

In the millinery department, we are waited on by two outstanding milliners, Borodinsky and Kuskin. They are assisted by Mildred Geffner, recently returned from Paris, who sees to it that S & L's has the most radical and least rational in ladies' headgear.

From there we proceed to the Women's Clothing Department, where Sylvia Zahn invites us to sit down. Ruth Ehrenkrantz models the new fall suits for us. Enter suddenly the latest in jungle apparel: white pitch helmet, linen shirt, white duck breeches, leather gloves, waterproof boots: small knives, large knives, shot-gun and all, completely entangled in white mosquito netting. We assist in the removal of the messy stuff, and discover Betty Schlappin. She informs us that she has just been appointed to a diplomatic post in the jungles of Africa. In her spare time, she intends to teach the natives the rudiments of spherical trigonometry and the fourth declension. On the way out, we pass by Dolce Seclow busily immersed in reams of paper, while Ethel Roessler watches over her with a critical eye. We learn that Dolce is designing an exclusive creation for Ethel to wear at her latest social function.

We go up to the tenth floor restaurant for luncheon. From the table we have chosen, we can recognize members of the ensemble which is presenting dinner music for S. & L. patrons. The leader is Willie Selednick. Herb Rothenberg is the pianist, and we recognize Myron Murray as the drummer. "Little Pep" Pfeifferstein and Jeanie Greenberg are the featured vocalists and entertainers. At a table close to the orchestra, Professors Burt Brody and Edward Kaplan, instructors at Juilliard, snort contemptuously into their soup. Every year, for the past twenty years, they have declared that jazz was on the way out.

Among the diners, we find Mr. and Mrs. P. Silberman and Mr. and Mrs. A. Tzeses, all four of whom are arguing on the comparative merits of their respective children. We hope that the argument does not lead to the dismemberment of the Tzeses and Silberman Law Firm.

Also present is Seymour Kaplan, who is being jointly interviewed by Gene (Kesselman) Sanford and Murray Aboff, while William Witt snaps pictures for any newspaper that cares to buy them. The two illustrious journalists are contending for an exclusive story from Mr. Kaplan, who has just returned from an expedition to the South Pole, and who is publishing a book, revealing his remarkable experiences.

We notice Stanley Gibbs, professional escort to maiden ladies, dining with a maiden lady, whose name we are not at liberty to divulge.

Dr. Robert Gohd, veterinarian and vegetarian, is complaining boisterously that he smells horse-meat in his onion soup.

After having eaten our luncheon, we go to the beauty salon, via the men's clothing department. Why, isn't that Ralph Schrenell, second lieutenant in the U. S. Navy, buying a white uniform with gold braid? (Kindly remove all nearby women!)

There's Jack Lueddeke ("something that'll please the ladies, and also be appropriate for an executive in a trucking concern.") Nat Kaufman, too, ("something in green, with a yellow stripe, and a boutonniere to match, please. To suit the ladies and also stand up under chemicals and acids.")

At the door of the beauty salon, we are greeted by Helen Leshins, Vivian Scher, and Phyllis Jesselsohn, body-sculpture experts, who suggest that we take a massage and steam box treatment. From the tops of our boxes, we see Wigler the Giggler, whose face is suffused with varying shades of red and purple, conversing animatedly with Marie Cordes, the Burlesque Queen of William Blumenfeld's "Spanish Casino." In another corner we observe Jean Hemmer, chairman of the 20th Annual Bazaar for the benefit of senile and impecunious Weequahic Alumni, having her hair set by Goldie Birn in preparation for the event.

Completely rejuvenated, we are strolling aimlessly about the store, when we are paged by David Harrison. "There is a telephone call for you in the private office of Mr. Amster." We thank him, and proceed to Mr. Amster's office. His smiling private secretary, Dorothy Blake, offers us the phone. It's Jeanne Hindman, saying that we must hurry if we want to make the plane back to Hollywood, and she'll be waiting for us in front of the hot-dog stand.

So, without further ado, we leave S. & L.'s and Newark behind, and return to our respective jobs on the coast.

If she wears her skirts up high,
 If you see her wink her eye;
 If she does the Suzie-Q
 If she's a Lambeth Walker too;
 If she shags and bumps the ground,
 If the guys all hang around,
 If she shouts, sings hi-de-ho,
 If her god's the radio,
 Loves Goodman, Clinton, Artie Shaw
 If when exhausted asks for more,
 She's a jitterbug!

 If with girl friends he gets wise;
 If he wears socks striped with red,
 If he never goes to bed;

 If he makes a lot of noise
 If he rates well with the boys;
 If his talk's chock full of jazz,
 If he swings a razz-ma-tazz,
 He's a jitterbug!

Senior Sportsmen

Marvin Tinsky.....Two letter man

MARVIN "SPIKE" TINSKY has been the recipient of six letters, three each in track and cross country. In his last year he captained the track squad. A consistent point-getter, he has won more races than he can remember. His specialty is the 880-yard run. In his four years at Weequahic he has not missed a single semester on either the track or cross country team. He failed to earn any letter in his freshman year but after that he always earned more than enough points to receive a letter.

Irving Edelman.....Two letter man

IRVING "BUDDY" EDELMAN has earned four letters in his last two years, earning two each in cross country and track. Edelman specialized in the mile run on the track team and did exceptionally well at that. In his last year he took more first places on the cross country team than did any other Weequahic runner.

Mervyn Lentz.....Two letter man

MERVYN LENTZ is another two letter man and earned both track and cross country letters. He has done well against hard competition and is a hard runner.

Milton Luria.....Two letter man

MILTON LURIA, football and baseball letter man, was outstanding in his last year, after having missed the greater part of the baseball season in his junior year due to illness. He held down the center position on the football team and was the sparkplug of the squad. He did most of the punting for the eleven, and in the eyes of many was the most outstanding man on the team. Adding to the laurels showered upon him was the fact that he was the first Indian to score against South Side since the inauguration of football between the two schools.

As a pitcher on the baseball squad he did as well as could be expected considering the material behind him. He had earned a good run average and lost his games because of errors.

Paul Silberman.....Two letter man

IN Paul Silberman, the school loses not only a basketball and track letterman but a good sport too. Win or lose, he has always shown the same respect for opponents and officials. He has earned three letters in basketball and two in track. In basketball, he represented Weequahic when the Indians held the Northern New Jersey Championship and the City Championship. A consistent point-getter in basketball, he did equally well as a member of the track team.

On the floor he led the quintet and at the end of the season was elected co-captain. He was the highest scorer for the team and was chosen on several all-state teams. Perhaps every other thing that Paul has ever done in his high school career may fade but there is one that those who have watched him play will never forget, and that was the New Brunswick-Weequahic basketball game in Paul's last year. The fact that he was high scorer was not the important fact. The fact that Weequahic lost by one point was not important. It was the way he played that mattered. No Frank Merriwell story could have had a more thrilling or exciting game and finish. For that game, if for no other, he deserved an all-state rating.

Sidney Reinfeld.....Two letter man

SID REINFELD was elected co-captain, in collaboration with Paul Silberman, of the basketball team. As a member of the track squad, he also gathered a sizeable number of points. Although he did not receive as much acclaim as did Silberman, he was a most dependable floor man and, when in form, had an extremely accurate eye for sinking baskets. One of his greatest faults was the fact that he did not attempt to shoot as many baskets as he should have.

In the state tournament, in Sid's last year he played about the finest game of his high school career. It was the first round game in which Belleville was pitted against the Indians. The team was definitely off-form and it was Reinfeld's accurate baskets that kept Weequahic in the game. He finally managed to rally the team together and they pulled the game out of the fire in the final minutes of play. Sid, however, was the highest scorer as well as the most outstanding man on the court.

Athletics

TENNIS

• Dave Stempler, Al

Rosen and Jack Horwitz, three good raquetteers, are members of the June 1939 class. To a great extent, it was because of their efforts that the tennis team did well this year. At the beginning of the season the team looked weak, but Stempler and Rosen in the singles and sometimes in the doubles and Horwitz devoting his time mainly to the doubles pulled the team up. Bernard Moser, manager, also graduates.

FENCING

• The first fencing team in the history of the school owes its very successful season to the efforts of Captain Bob Greenbaum and Barrett Ershowsky. Both of these men did well during the season. Ershowsky was much more erratic than the always-dependable Greenbaum but was still a mainstay of the team. Arnold Jacobs, manager, also graduates. Both Greenbaum and Ershowsky will be sorely missed by the team.

FOOTBALL

• The football team was hard hit by graduation, losing seven regulars. No backfield men were lost but virtually the whole line has graduated. Those graduating are: Milton Luria, center; Maurice Hill, end; Jack Lueddeke, end; Sanford Lehrhoff, linesman; Norman Blum, linesman; Lawrence Girard, linesman; and Lou Tobolsky, linesman. This combination, however, lacks weight and for this reason it was seldom, if ever, that they all played at the same time. Taken man for man, however, they are all good linesmen.

BASKETBALL

• Three players and two managers is the total loss of the basketball team. Yet, although the figures do not look any too disheartening, when one looks at the names of these players the value of the loss can be appreciated. The graduating members are Paul Silberman, Sidney Reinfeld and Hyman Boydman. The managers are Lester Suss and Ralph Schrenell.

The basketball team, as usual, has done very well, due mainly to the efforts of the two graduating regulars, Silberman and Reinfeld. Both of these men were elected co-captains of the team. Boydman was a substitute and did well. He scored fairly well and had he developed a variety of shots for goals would have made the team as a regular instead of a substitute.

BASEBALL

The pitchers were good and would have been better, had they had a better fielding team behind them. Konel was kept out of the lineup for a part of the season due to illness. Billet, hard-hitting fielder, was one of the best sluggers on the team. Greenberg has played about every position in the infield and took over the backstop position when he felt that it would benefit the team. Cohen, Fisher and Goldman were all good substitutes.

TRACK and CROSS COUNTRY TEAMS

• With the track team taking a larger loss in number than the cross country team but a smaller loss in percentage, graduation has taken three cross country and six track members.

In the track division the team loses: Captain Marvin Tinsky, Buddy Edelman, Mervyn Lentz, Paul Silberman, Sidney Reinfeld, and Sherman Goldstein, former manager Arthur Tzeses, and the present managers, Seymour Altsheler and Jerome Marlis.

The graduating cross country members are: Marvin Tinsky, Irwin Edelman and Mervyn Lentz.

LITERATURE

The Literary Editor Speaks

The problem of writing something which will be considered suitable for Yearbook publication
Is enough to drive the president of the Women's Christian Temperance
Union to inebriation.
It's all very easy writing for a magazine or periodical
Or even for The Daily Worker if you happen to be a radical,
But in this business if you want to escape the censor
You have to be as careful as anything and as agile as a fensor.

In the first place, you must never use profanity,
And your heroine, whether she's queen or a chorus girl, should always be a model of virganity.
If you're writing a romance, the love scenes must be as cold as an icicle,
Because that's the sort of thing fit for boys and girls who are just graduated from hicicle,
And there must certainly be nothing ribald
In any of the lines you may have scribald.
Besides, you can't be everyone's amigo
Unless you're sure to satisfy their ego,
So you have to say nice things about people who are really perfectly horrible,
Which I'm sure you will agree with me is absolutely terrible.
On the other hand, a lot of sentimental burbling
May prove to be disturbing
Because people will think it's odd if you suddenly become very affectionate, and even odder
If you suddenly evince too many tearful regrets because you're leaving the dear old Alma Modder.
Finally, any reference to phantoms or to witches or the Dybbuk
Belongs in a magazine like "Supernatural Stories," not in a Senior Ybbuk.
So I decided that the softest thing to do was write this poem, which is in the style of Mr. Ogden Nash;
And I don't feel remorse about stealing his style, because I am not writing for cash.
And although, after thinking it over in a manner totally impartial and judicial
I admit that Mr. Nash's type of verse is perhaps a trifle superficial,
Still, nobody wants to read about topics philosophical and meaty
When the weather is hot enough for the African jungles or the Equator or Tahiti,
And I'd much rather sit on the porch eating an ice cream cone or a popsicle
Than sit at my desk being elegaic or Thanatopsicle.

JANET MONES.

Ode To A Sailor

To him who cannot resist the call
Of the roaring wind and the sea
The land holds no inducement, so
Let him find a ship and be free.
Let him sail and conquer the ocean
And prosper in his choice;
Let him rove throughout it happy
And let his soul rejoice.
Let him steer his ship toward the sky
With the wheel ever under his hand
Let him always wander out to sea
Away, away from the land.
Let him rough the stirring waters
Where the carded mountains coil
Where the rocking billows rise
And hold him in their boil.
Let him steer his ship alone
Where the wrathing of the storm
Warps and pulls his ship around
And sends it back in form.
Let him weather the glassy main,
Let him live in the wind and gale
Let him find his way in the brewing sea
Although his ship be frail.
Let him steer through the balmy breezes
And through the calm of the sea;
And let him lie on deck in the morning
With the air as cool as can be.
Let him feel the tug of the tropic moon
And the urge to have romance;
Let him feel the surge of the waters below
As he sails o'er the great expanse.
Let him lie on deck at midnight
And see each shining star
As they keep a vigil over him
And watch him from afar.
To him, this sailor of my heart
I give my blessings three:
A hardened hand, a daring soul
And a life and death on the sea.

• The watch said eleven forty-five as a quiet hush settled upon the street before the advent of midnight. The hurried atmosphere of day and the bustle of activity had temporarily relinquished their hold and there remained only a few strong who ventured forth to refute its sovereignty. There was no moon and the street-lamp cast a weary glow over its corner.

I stood back in the dim shadows of the porch, although there was hardly anyone to see me. Yet, since my presence in this part of London might arouse some question, I took no unnecessary chances. I had been waiting in the same spot since ten-thirty and the nocturnal scenes that met my eyes, while characteristic of this underworld district, only mildly served my purpose.

I remained solidly fixed to my post and every now and then I cast a wearying glance up and down the street. It was tiring standing there just waiting for something to happen; so I lit a cigarette to help me pass the time.

At this particular moment, I noticed what appeared to be a commotion in a hallway half-a-block away. The cigarette dropped from my hand. I edged out from the shadows to get a better view when suddenly a shot pierced the dismal quiet and I saw a short, hunched man run noisily from the hall. He clattered down the steps and appeared to be passing near me. I drew back behind a post and began to feel warm.

This same man stumbled and fell not five feet from the porch. He was muttering nervously to himself and looked menacingly about. I drew back more and a warm sweat seized me. Through wide open eyes I saw him tie his shoe-laces, look about again and disappear around the corner.

I didn't move for five minutes. At the end of that time I heaved a heavy sigh of thankfulness. Imaginary ideas correlative to what I had just seen crowded my mind as I moved slowly away from the shadows. Then I hastened up the street away from the corner where the man disappeared and a few blocks later, I hailed a taxi.

In fifteen minutes, for I told the driver to hurry, I was seated in my apartment before an active type writer, hastily composing my first short-story.

—Eugene Kesselman

• The moon rode high, drenching the world below it with gleaming silver. An occasional wisp of gray cloud drifted across its pale yellow face. The night was still, except for a breath of wind which whispered through the birches, as they stood like gaunt sentinels, their ashen trunks blending with the iridescent snow, as it lay like a glittering mantle over the frozen earth. The world slept.

—Theodore Gams

Commencement

• "To commence means to begin, doesn't it?" asked my young sister.

"Why yes," I answered, "But what makes you ask?"

"Well," she explained, "if commence means to begin, why call it commencement when you graduate from school? After all, it is only when you finish school that you are graduated, not when you begin it."

Now, come to think of it, that question really took some thought. When I sat down to figure it out, this was the answer I conceived.

Commencement may mean finishing school, but what it really means is the beginning of a new era in our lives. Commencement is like the threshold between the two important phases of our existence; youth and maturity. Now that we have passed through the first division, we are standing on the threshold—commencement—and probably peeping into the second session.

Some of us are going on to further our education—some are going to find employment, but whatever it is we are going to do, we are now just stealing a glimpse into the next room. All of us are thinking—wishing—hoping to obtain the coveted position in life that we really want. But thinking, wishing, and hoping are not the way to realize those attainments. Getting out and working for them is the only solution. You must work—and work hard for the things you desire in this world today. But then, there is nothing worthwhile possessing if you do not have to strive for it. So now let us resolve to go out into the world and to do our best to reach our station, one to be justly proud of.

Now as we stand on the brink and peer, perhaps a little dubiously, across the threshold, let's throw out our chests and exclaim, "Here I come, World, ready for anything!!!"

And so commencement IS the beginning—the beginning of a new chapter in our lives.

—Selma Meltzer

• Spring had swelled the waters of the little rivulet, by melting snow in the towering mountains above it. Now it was a good-sized stream, and, instead of murmuring, it shouted aloud, as it went its devious ways, twisting around water-logged stumps, gurgling over mossy stones, rippling above the polished pebbles that lined the clear, limpid pools. It chuckled as it swept by the wakening fields, and under the rustic bridges, and past the forest glades. Then, reluctantly, it released its water burden into the rushing traffic of the river.

A Concert Clipping

• If you have never been inside a concert hall during a piano recital, I might say that it is unearthly quiet during the performance—so quiet that a mild cough or the gentle sound of a person shifting in his seat would disrupt the attention of all persons in the vicinity of the sound.

At this particular concert, a certain Jonathan Mittle was attending his first recital and was seated not far from the stage. Being greatly bored by what he thought was the most distressing music he had ever heard and by the intense quiet of the audience, he proceeded to clean and trim his finger-nails.

The pianist on the stage was in the midst of a Chopin Etude. His head was slightly bent over the keyboard and he was carefully doling out the rippling melodies to an unusually appreciative audience. Suddenly above the beautiful harmony, he seemed to distinguish a short clipping sound. It was very annoying. He raised himself as far as he was allowed in order to look into the piano. Perhaps a mouse was bored by Chopin and was biting the mechanism, but nothing was noticed beyond the view of felt-covered hammers striking the strings.

A puzzled look appeared on the pianist's face and a warm sweat broke out on his brow. The noise continued and he began shifting on his stool to look around the stage and orchestra pit. While doing this he continued to play, when to his amazement he noticed our Jonathan Mittle nonchalantly clipping his nails. The audience, by now, was looking menacingly at Mittle; but he continued, unmindful of the growing sentiment against him.

Suddenly the pianist stopped, Chopin stopped and so did Mr. Mittle. He looked up just in time to see the artist rise and walk to the front of the stage. The pianist's eyes flashed and he looked directly at Mr. Mittle. "Sir!" he began, "I'm sure, if you would come up on the stage and demonstrate your method of nail-trimming, the audience would greatly appreciate your efforts."

It appeared they already had, because before the pianist could finish three men in Tuxedo attire hurried down the aisle and seized Mr. Mittle. He didn't even have time to make any responsive action of embarrassment, so quickly was the exit executed.

I know for a fact that Mr. Mittle never went to a concert again and he files his nails now, probably because it makes less noise.
